The flavors of Japan on select flights

Air Tahiti Nui rethinks its meals on board its Japanese line

Published in La Dépêche de Tahiti on Thursday, February 21st, 2013

The Japanese chef Masakatsu Kumagai was in Fenua to prepare model meals to be served on ATN's Papeete-Narita line. Since 2007, Air Tahiti Nui has been creating a new range of meals every three years for its passengers on board Papeete-Narita, completely changing its colors, flavors and presentation for the mainly Japanese tourists returning to their country. Though the meals on the departure flight are prepared by a Japanese company, on the return flight (Papeete-Narita), it is up to Newrest to provide the meals. There's no way that Air Tahiti Nui can ask the company, based out of the airport, to offer only uru, coconut milk and raw fish. "After one to two weeks spent in Polynesia, Japanese tourists are happy that we can offer them food from their own country when they board the plane", confided Thierry Brandelli, assistant manager of catering for ATN.

The meals are precise. 250 grams for business class, 210 grams for economy class. This year, once again, the TFK Corporation sent one of its Japanese chefs to create 24 meals, 16 of which will be reproduced by Newrest chefs and served on flights.

The Japanese chef isn't a young bud in the restaurant industry. In fact, Masakatsu Kumagai already has 33 years of experience in the kitchen. In 1979, he started his career as an employee in a Japanese restaurant, and the opportunities quickly started rolling in. He joined the Japanese Food Kitchen of the TFK Corporation, whose main focus is catering for Japan Airlines (JAL). He was then transferred to LSG Sky Chefs in Germany, where he looked after customer satisfaction for JAL and Lufthansa. In 1999, he worked in the United States for the Nikko in-flight catering company, where he was in charge of JAL, Delta Airlines and Singapore Airlines. In 2003, he returned to the Japanese Food Kitchen (TFK Corp) in Japan as Executive chef before obtaining his current position as Master executive chef.

Marcel and Linda

FRIDAY, 26 JULY 2013

Every day around the world, 600 catering places and 200 remote site canteens benefit from the expertise of Newrest. Because the Group is concerned about its employees' health, Newrest Catering and Newrest Remote site have implemented educational tools to remind them of the basics of a healthy lifestyle and provide them nutritional advice.

A few months ago, posters featuring a little girl, Madeleine, have been created for the school canteen children. Now it's Linda and Marcel, her parents, who are set as examples for adults in a fun way. Through panels hung up in company restaurants, administrations, hospitals and clinics managed by Newrest Catering, as well as in their remote site restaurants, employees learn keys to good nutrition and discover how to eat better while taking care of their heart. Linda and Marcel also recommend to do sport regularly and to move more: for example, at work, it is advisable not to sit for too long and to stretch occasionally.

Let's keep in mind that in the eating places managed by the Group, a qualified staff is working with the clients to develop menus ensuring diversity and food manufacturing processes are constantly checked. Newrest pays great attention to the certification of all its production units (most of them are certified ISO 9001 or ISO 22000).

Newrest Rahal Maroc acquires 100% of ATASA

THURSDAY, 19 DECEMBER 2013

PRESS RELEASE

In the framework of its expansion in Morocco, Newrest Group has acquired 100% of ATASA, the Moroccan subsidiary of the Spanish Areas Group, present in airport concessions - airport bars and restaurants, mainly in Casablanca, Marrakesh, Tangier, Rabat and Agadir – and collective and inflight catering, mostly serving leading European and Middle Eastern international airlines. Its turnover totals close to €10 million, and it employs 250 individuals.

This acquisition will allow Newrest to grow within the Kingdom and expand its scope of business to include inflight catering, Newrest Group's core business.

This acquisition was finalized by Newrest Rahal Maroc, a leader in catering with a portfolio of highly diverse clients: public administrations and major state structures, elementary and secondary schools, hospitals and clinics, banks, industry and mines. Newrest Rahal Maroc is also present in airport concessions throughout Morocco.

Present in Morocco for close to 30 years, Newrest Rahal Maroc's turnover totals €43 million and it employs 2,100 individuals. Newrest Rahal Maroc is a joint venture created by Newrest Group and Rahal Group, whose CEO is Mr Abdelkarim Raha Essoulami, a renowned Moroccan entrepreneur and caterer.

It strengthens our position within the Kingdom and is the culmination of the successful endeavours of our joint venture with the Rahal Group, the ambassador of the art of Moroccan hospitality throughout the world. We will now have comprehensive expertise in all of our businesses (inflight catering, airport concessions and collective catering) and will be able to fulfil our clients' and airports' requirements, thereby positioning ourselves for the country's expected growth" declared Olivier Sadran, Co-President of Newrest Group.

First A380 flight for Emirates in South Africa

TUESDAY, 24 DECEMBER 2013

"L'Hotellerie Restauration", a magazine dedicated to catering, included the following article on Friday, 27 December 2013, entitled "Air Caraïbes and Emmanuel Renault offer a signature meal at an altitude of 30,000 feet" on the occasion of the celebration of Air Caraïbes' tenth anniversary:

"To celebrate 10 years of transatlantic flights, Air Caraïbes wanted to thank its customers for their loyalty by inviting them to share an extraordinary flight. On 12 December, the 710 passengers on board the two Paris/Fort-de-France and Paris/Pointe-à-Pitre Airbuses had no idea of what would await them at Orly Sud Airport. Emmanuel Renault, a three-star Michelin chef from the Flocons de Sel in Megève, and "Meilleur Ouvrier de France", with five toques from Gault & Millau, concocted their menu. The meal was prepared by the chef himself in our kitchens, as Newrest is the airline's usual inflight caterer.

Of course, all of the constraints related to the preparation and service of an inflight meal had to be taken into consideration, and the products used had to be compatible with reheating in the Airbus ovens. Another surprise for passengers: Cyril Lignac prepared the dessert. A truly innovative project that enthused Marc Rochet, Chairman of Air Caraïbes' Board of Directors, present on the Orly/Pointe-à-Pitre flight. "Preparing a gastronomic three-star meal for 710 individuals while complying with the restrictions imposed by Air Caraïbes' aeronautical environment was a challenge that I found attractive right away. This is a fun and original way to celebrate an anniversary, and I enjoyed it immensely," stated Emmanuel Renault. And the climax of this trip: a private concert with the performance of 10 Gospel singers seated in different parts of the aircraft's cabin ... in flight!

The menu served on board:

Aperitif: toast of foie gras on a bed of pineapple tartar, gingerbread with smoked duck magret, Bollinger rosé champagne. Appetizer: carpaccio of scallops with herb "tobacco". Then either veal chuck with Mondeuse and juniper sauce, or rascasse and ouassou shrimp biscuit, an adaptation of one of Emmanuel Renault's signature dishes, followed by a slice of goat cheese with thyme and Beaufort de Savoie, from the chef's home region. And, finally, a Caribbean chocolate cake, this time prepared by Cyril Lignac, along with an amber, 10-year aged rum."
